

Joint inspections of services for children and young people subject to compulsory supervision orders living at home with their parents in South Ayrshire

Parents' survey analysis report

Prepared by the Care Inspectorate in partnership with His Majesty's Inspectorate of Education, Healthcare Improvement Scotland and His Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary in Scotland

February 2026

Introduction

This survey for parents was carried out as part of our joint inspection of services for children and young people subject to compulsory supervision orders living at home with their parents in South Ayrshire.

The survey was aimed at parents of children and young people subject to compulsory supervision orders living at home with their parents. For these joint inspections, when we refer to parents, we mean birth or adoptive parents and parents' partners where they are not the child's parent but reside with them and have a significant caring role. We do not mean formal carers, for example a foster carer who provides respite care or a kinship carer.

The survey did not ask parents to identify themselves and was therefore anonymous. The purpose of the survey was to gather parents' views about the support they have received. This includes comments on their experiences of being listened to and included and the impact of support.

Method

We developed the survey using a range of approaches including:

- involving our young inspection volunteers who have lived experience of children's services
- reviewing feedback from children and young people who have completed surveys
- researching other survey tools and approaches.

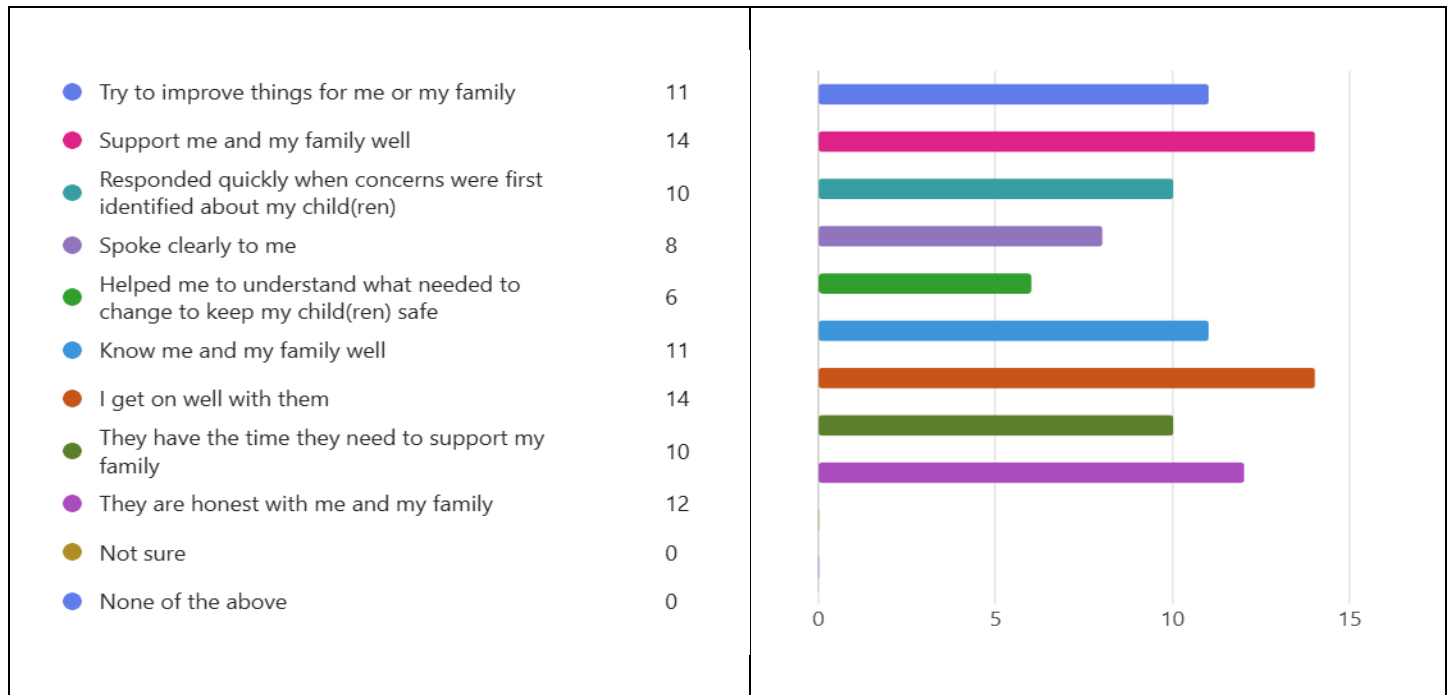

Local partners were tasked with distributing and supporting parents to complete the surveys. We advised local partners to carefully consider the appropriateness of the survey based on the needs of each individual family, given surveys are not appropriate for all. We translated the survey into other languages if partners requested this, to ensure accessibility.

The survey results form one type of inspection evidence. During the joint inspection, inspectors use a range of other methods to gather the views and understand the experiences of children and young people and parents.

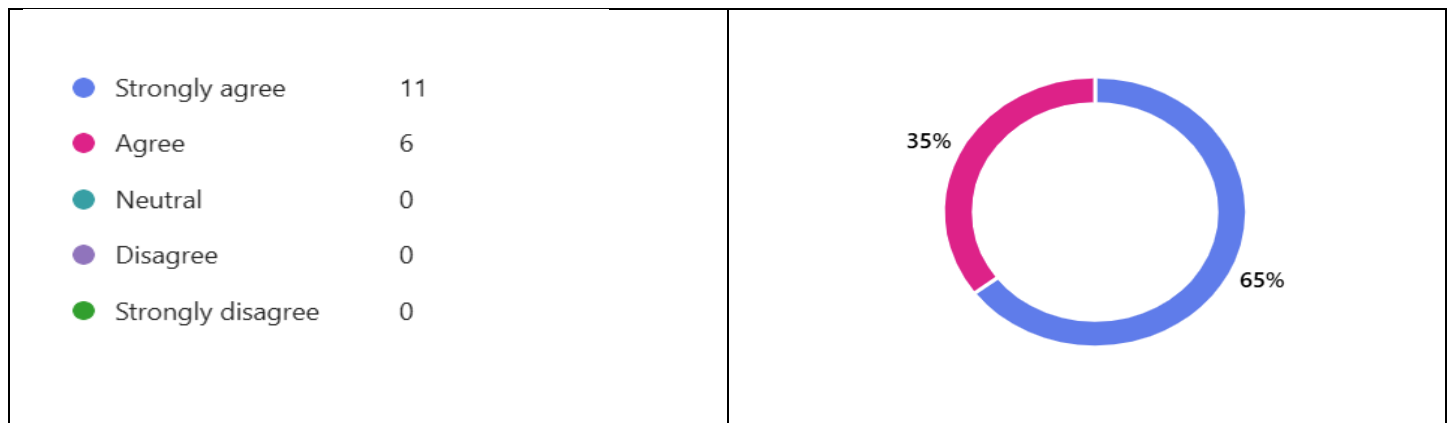

Please note that:

- Percentages presented in the report are all rounded to the nearest whole number and therefore may not always sum to 100.
- If particular questions were not completed, these were excluded when calculating percentages.
- Data labels which appear on the charts provided are based on the numbers of responses.
- Where comparisons have been made, the significance of any differences has not been measured.
