

Joint inspections of services for children and young people subject to compulsory supervision orders living at home with their parents in South Ayrshire

Children and young people's survey analysis report

Prepared by the Care Inspectorate in partnership with His Majesty's Inspectorate of Education, Healthcare Improvement Scotland and His Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary in Scotland

February 2026

Introduction

This survey for children and young people was carried out as part of our joint inspection of services for children and young people subject to compulsory supervision orders living at home with their parents in South Ayrshire.

The survey was aimed at children and young people subject to compulsory supervision orders living at home with their parents. The survey did not ask children and young people to identify themselves and was therefore anonymous. The purpose of the survey was to gather children and young people's views on their experiences of support to help:

- to be listened to, treated with respect and included
- to stay safe at home, in the community, at school and online
- to improve wellbeing – physical health, mental health, engagement at school, physical activity and relationships
- to make and keep loving and supporting relationships.

Method

We developed the survey using a range of approaches including:

- involving our young inspection volunteers who have lived experience of children's services
- consulting children and young people with care experience
- reviewing feedback from children and young people who have completed surveys
- researching other survey tools and approaches.

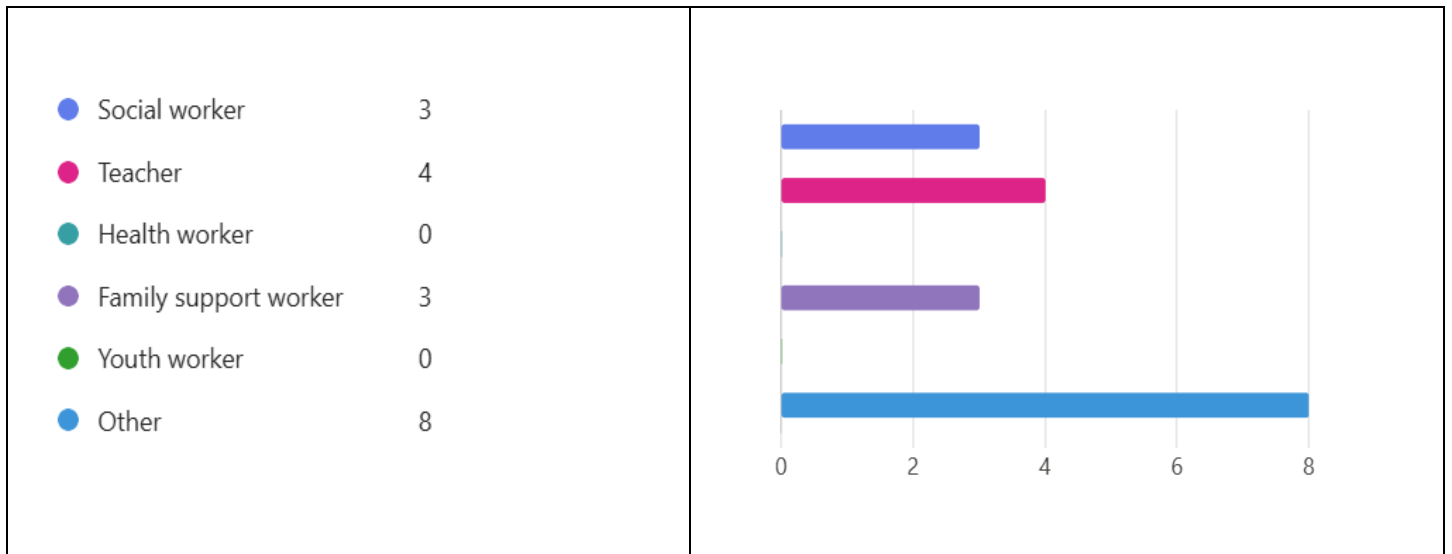

Local partners were tasked with distributing and supporting children and young people, aged 8 and over, to complete the surveys. We advised local partners to carefully consider the appropriateness of the survey based on the needs of each individual child or young person, given surveys are not appropriate for all. We recommended that all children and young people be offered support to complete the surveys. We translated the survey into other languages if partners requested this, to ensure accessibility.

The survey results form one type of inspection evidence. During the joint inspection, inspectors use a range of other methods to gather the views and understand the experiences of children and young people.

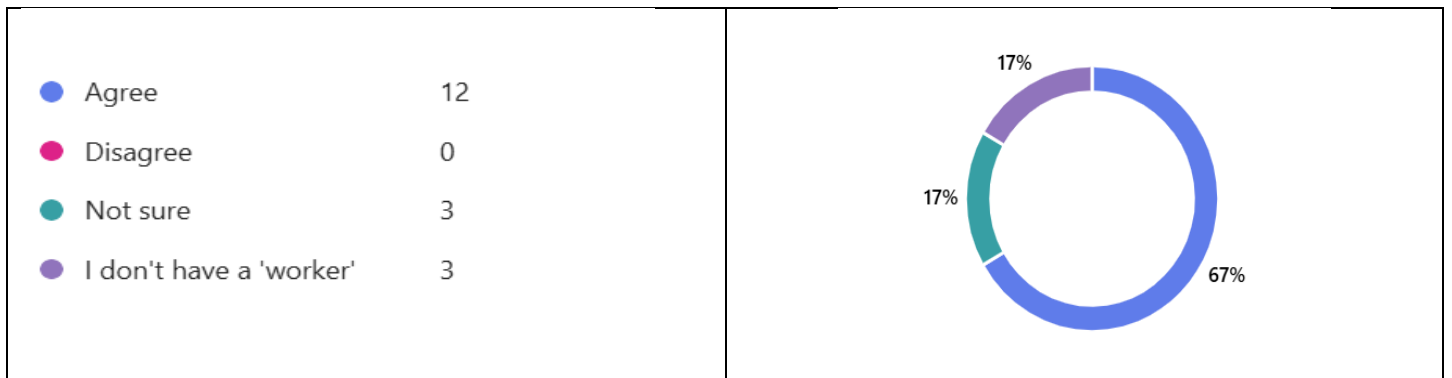

Please note that:

- Percentages presented in the report are all rounded to the nearest whole number and therefore may not always sum to 100.
- If particular questions were not completed, these were excluded when calculating percentages.
- Data labels which appear on the charts provided are based on the numbers of responses.
- Where comparisons have been made, the significance of any differences has not been measured.
